From deep underground came a muffled, robotic voice.

"DARK ENVIRONMENT DETECTED. ENGAGING NIGHT-VISION MODE."

Axel let out a wild laugh of pure joy. He searched the smoldering crater for the tunnel opening he now knew had to be there. Rosie pointed it out to him – a hole as wide across as an elevator shaft, but half-hidden under an old disused army truck with no wheels that had landed on top of it.

Axel peered in. Deep at the bottom of the shaft, two steady and unblinking blue eyes looked up at him.

"Hang in there, buddy," he said. "We're on our way."

BEAST nodded.

"BEAST KNOWS. BEAST IS NOT AFRAID," he said.

As last-minute plans go, it had been a bit of a desperate gamble. Axel hadn't been sure that Gus Grabbem would take the bait. Luckily, the boy was every bit the spoiled, tantrum-throwing brat that Agent Omega had warned Axel about.
