Nat the Cat is making breakfast for her friends, but a bit of her bread dough is missing. Was Billy the Goat too hungry to wait?

- Jez Alborough's signature repetitive rhyme and humor.
- Gentle, cautionary tale: feelings, manners.
- Friendship, sharing, patience.
- Ideal story time read-aloud.

So Billy brought butter, jam and three mugs,
some knives and plates and the juice in a jug.

He slowly laid out the cups, knives and plates
then ran out of things to do – except wait.

But the food made waiting harder because his tummy kept saying how hungry he was.
The juice in the jug looked zingy and yummy,
"I want some of that," cried Billy Goat's tummy.
